Arlington the Victim of Czarism.

Governor Morrill Vetoes the Bill granting

ARLINGTON TOWNSHIP

The Right to Build and Operate a Flour Mill.

Like Cleveland He Can't Stand Paternalism.

During the first days of the legislature the citizens of Arlington townthe legislature for the privilege of holding an election to vote bonds to build and maintain a flouring mill in ship irrespective of party, petit'oned the prosperous little city of Arlington. The petition was introduced in both branches and passed without a dissenting vote.

to be opened was to them to be a day of rejolcing when they could snap their fingers in the face of the Mill Combine and cease paying tribute to that merceless trust. But not so. The bill upon reaching the desk of private Secretary Bristow was killed by the marks of the power behind the throne

"It seems to be the intention of the townships and other political subdivsions of the state were not organized, nor was it ever intended they should be ergunized for such purposes. I regard such legislation as victous and a step in the wrong direction. If a township or city is to go into the milling business I see no reason why municipal organizations cannot engage in divers kinds of enterprises coming into direct competition with individual enterprises and all t-nding in the direc tion of the state owning and control-ing all manner of private business. It is contrary to the very spirit of our constitution and a direct step towards paternalism and against good government.

The Georgia minstrels played to a rowed house last night at the opera house, and nothing but words of pra's were heard for everything. At half past seven the band played some beau-iful selections which drew a large rowd, and the excellence of the music vas an introduction to what was on the program in the opera house. The inging was declared to be nearly perect and the gacs and jokes were new. The case walk was a great fea-ure of the entertainment, and to judge by the encores, the people of Dead wood w thessed a show that has not been equalled before. Billy Kersands was in his element and the audience fully appreciated the efforts made to muse them.
